

EMOTIONALLY WOUNDED YOUNG PEOPLE - PART 2 STRUCTURE OF COURSE

CHAPTER 1: SUBSTANCE ABUSE AND ADDICTION IN YOUNG PEOPLE	9
• A tremendous challenge to educators and the Church	9
• The potential to addiction	11
• Drugs could be divided into three broader groups	12
○ Depressants	12
○ Stimulants	13
○ Hallucinogens	13
• Complicating factors	13
• Possible causes of addiction	15
○ Curiosity	15
○ Peer pressure	15
○ Fun	15
○ Imitation	15
○ A declaration of independence	16
○ To get rid of inhibitions	16
○ Escape	17
○ Addiction	18
• Other reasons why young people get involved	18
• Current scope of the crisis	20
• The tolerance factor	21
• Signs and symptoms of alcohol and/or drug abuse	21
○ The profile of a child who is at high risk	24
○ The profile of a child who is a low risk	24
• Plan of action	25
○ Conversations with the parents	26
○ Constructive confrontation of the child	27
○ An effective therapeutic approach	28
○ A few Pastoral perspectives from Job 18:5-14	29
○ What can I as a parent do to prevent substance abuse?	32

CHAPTER 2: A FEW COUNSELLING MODELS – I	34
• Matthew D. Selekman	34
○ The first session with the family	34
○ Eight key questions for evaluation	35
○ Two important therapeutic tasks	36
○ Facilitating the establishment of connections and commitments	37
○ Four effective techniques	39
• Evelyn Lim	42
○ Gain insight regarding your childhood programming	42
○ Identify repetitive life patterns	43
○ Acknowledge your pain	43
○ Distance yourself from self-condemnation	43
○ Embrace the wounded inner-child	44
○ You have to reveal courage	44
○ Liberate yourself by means of forgiveness	44
• Kam-Shing Yip	45
○ To realize the feelings and message behind the acting-out behaviour	45
○ Identify the needs and capabilities behind the acting-out behaviour	45
○ Facilitating interpersonal communications and emotional venting	46
○ Creating a better social environment	46
• Duncan Sinclair	46
• Aphrodite Matsakis	48
○ Guidelines to measure progress	48
○ Indications of healing	50
○ Chaos changes into a source of strength and ratification	50
• Beverley and Tom Rodgers	51
○ Return	51
○ Repent	52
○ Renew and restore	52
○ Rejoice	53

CHAPTER 3: A FEW COUNSELLING MODELS – II	54
• Donald E. Sloat	54
○ Trust	54
○ To talk	54
○ To feel	55
○ Identifying needs	56
○ Becoming your own person	56
○ Accept everything about me	57
○ The development of authority	58
• Dave Ziegler	59
○ Begin by creating an atmosphere of safety, trust and exploration	59
○ Try to understand the nature of the trauma and wounding in the person's life	59
○ Explore trauma memories and associated responses	59
○ Counteract any harmful affective responses	60
○ Some measure of re-exposure to the trauma is critically important - just as important as when and how it happens	60
○ Restructure the meaning of the trauma by allowing the child to alter the end of the trauma story	61
○ Replace problematic behavioural responses with adaptive behaviour	61
○ Build a new internal view of the identity	61
○ Teach the teenager certain specific survival strategies	62
○ Self-control can change trauma and other stressful situations to experiences that result in resilience	62
• Rich van Pelt and Jim Hancock	63
○ Create a safe place	63
○ Obtain all the facts	64
○ Take time to listen to their stories	64
○ Create a trust-relationship	64
○ Allow space for the expression of feelings	65
○ Assess the level of immediate risk	65
○ Evaluate the significance of your involvement	66

• Mary J. Yerkes	67
○ Tell yourself the truth	67
○ Seek professional help and guidance	67
○ Establish and maintain healthy relationships	67
○ Spend time in God's presence and with His Word	68
○ Forgiveness	68
• Norman Wright	68
○ Practical guidelines regarding the counselling of teenagers in general	70
▪ Reference	69
▪ Confidentiality	69
▪ Positive and hopeful	69
▪ Communication	69
▪ A support system	70
○ Three important elements regarding providing help to adolescents	70
▪ Reliving	70
▪ Releasing of feelings	71
▪ Re-organization	71
• Mark Gregston	71
○ Ignore the message that you must leave them alone	72
○ Simply listen	72
○ Encourage them to accept help	72
○ Be vigilant	73
○ Never let down a teenager	73
CHAPTER 4: A FEW COUNSELLING MODELS - III	74
• Practical guidelines in preparation of the road ahead	74
• Sara Trollinger	74
○ Boundaries	74
○ Good self-esteem and certainty regarding identity	75
○ Positive peer pressure	76
○ Establishing and building a strong faith	76
• Matthew D. Selekman	80
• Gregory Jantz	81

○ To stop blaming	81
○ The healing power of forgiveness	81
○ Re-proclamation of your personal abilities	81
○ Make use of sober thinking to avoid conflict	82
○ Nine steps in case new painful situations arise	82
○ To establish and maintain healthy relationships	83
○ Characteristics of a healthy communicator	84
○ To discover your talents and gifts	84
○ How to realize progress and progression	85
CHAPTER 5: FACTORS THAT ARE CONDUCTIVE TO EFFECTIVE COUNSELLING OF EMOTIONALLY WOUNDED YOUNG PEOPLE	86
• Tips by Parrot and Parrot	87
• The ability to listen	88
• The importance of telling	91
• Lies have to be identified	92
• To make contact with emotions	95
• To return to the original scene	98
• The importance of a grieving process	100
• Forgiveness	103
○ Self-forgiveness	107
APPENDIX A: Symptoms of the emotionally wounded person	109
APPENDIX B: Possible indications of rejection	111
APPENDIX C: Characteristics of a good helper	112
APPENDIX D: My child and stress – 1	116
APPENDIX E: My child and stress – 2	118
APPENDIX F: Common symptoms of too much stress in a child	120
APPENDIX G: Important sources and contact details	121
BIBLIOGRAPHY	124